

THE GREEK BEATEN

Hanson Won Two Out of Three Falls from Kilonis

Match Was the Roughest of the Season, Big Crowd Witnessed It, and Confusion Reigned at the Finish.

Before the largest audience of the season in the Auditorium Tuesday evening John Kilonis, champion middleweight wrestler of Greece and England, lost two out of three falls to Fritz Hanson in a match that for interest has never been excelled here. Each man was rough and punished his opponent unmercifully and that there is bad blood between them was apparent. Washington Bailey filled the difficult role of referee to the satisfaction of the greater part of the audience. Previous to the main bout a "battle royal" between six youthful wrestlers furnished plenty of amusement. Joe Yarbelle was the first to go, followed in order by "Dutchy" Clinton Graves, Ralph Paquette, Joe Wood and Justin Moran. Edward Moran was the winner in 13 minutes but his younger and smaller brother gave him a tussle for honors for more than nine minutes of exciting wrestling. Both boys showed a good knowledge of the holds and breaks, and the little fellow was warmly applauded while the frequently squirmed out of dangerous positions.

The preliminary was between John Barden and Ed Hollis, the local grainingsman. The men worked about even, Barden was on top most of the time and won the first fall in 11 minutes with a double arm hold. After five minutes rest they continued and at the expiration of their allotted 30 minutes Bailey gave the match to Barden.

When the two principals in the main bout were introduced Kilonis came on the stage with his left eye painted, having had it blackened the previous night in a match in Manchester, N. H. The referee showed the crowd the blacked Kilonis won Feb. 26, in Pawtucket, R. I., from Berry, representing the middleweight championship of England. Then followed the roughest match ever seen here. Fritz won the first fall in 70 minutes with a hammerlock and head scissors. The second went to the Greek in nine minutes and 20 seconds with a half-Nelson and crotch hold, after he had used the local man's head for a pile driver on the floor until he was dazed. Fritz was completely knocked out from the blow on his head and needed assistance to get to his dressing room. His inability to walk was not acting. The third fall went to Hanson, when after three minutes of suffering from an ankle hold the Greek threw up the sponge in 53 minutes of wrestling.

In the first minute of wrestling Kilonis complained that the Swede had used grease on his body to prevent his opponent from securing holds but the referee decided that his claim was without foundation. The men began to be rough from the first minute of wrestling and the bout continued rough all the way. Once Kilonis stopped because Kilonis attempted to change it to a boxing exhibition and was only prevented by the referee, who stepped between the men to keep them apart. It is useless to attempt to describe in detail the match. At the finish there was the greatest confusion. The supporters of Kilonis claimed that Fritz had toe hold on the Greek, which was barred, and when Bailey gave the decision to Hanson there was a din of mingled cheers, hisses and applause. Hanson tried to explain the hold, but the disgruntled ones refused to allow him to be heard. Kilonis attempted to speak, but his voice, too, was drowned in the uproar and while he was trying to make himself heard Stage Manager Birch dropped the curtain.

After the match Kilonis said that he did not lose on a toe hold but on an ankle hold. His ankle was locked between Hanson's banded forearm and biceps and the local man twisted it in a manner almost identical with the toe hold. The pain was just as bad, he said, and although it was not the toe hold it was enough to make him surrender. Although the toe hold was barred the ankle hold was not, but is safe to say that the next time the Greek wrestles with the former hold barred he will remember to also prohibit the use of the one that was his undoing Tuesday night.

When Roosevelt was Advocating Taft's Election in 1908.

"I do not believe there can be found in the whole country a man so well fitted to be President. He is not only absolutely fearless, absolutely honest, absolutely upright, but he has the widest acquaintance with the nation's needs, without and within, and the broadest sympathies with all our citizens. He would be practically a President of the plain people as Lincoln, yet not Lincoln himself would be freer from the least taint of demagoguery, the least tendency to appeal to class hatred of any kind."

Stops Lameness

Sloan's Liniment is a reliable remedy for any kind of horse lameness. Will kill the growth of spavin, curb or splint, absorb enlargements, and is excellent for swellings, fistula and thrush.

Here's Proof.

"I used Sloan's Liniment on a mule for 'high lameness,' and cured her. I am never without a bottle of your liniment. It has brought me more of it than any other remedy for pains." EARLY KIRBY, Cassidy, Ky.

"Sloan's Liniment is the best made. I have removed very large boils off a horse with it. It is one of the best known crack on a mare that was awfully bad. I have also healed raw, sore necks on three horses. I have healed grease feed on a mare that could hardly walk." ANTHONY G. HAYES, Oakland, Pa., Route No. 1.

SLOAN'S LINIMENT

"My dogs had got cholera three days before we got your liniment, which I was advised to try. I have used it now for three days and my dogs are all right. One dog died before I got the liniment, but I have not lost any since."

SPORTING.

Sour Grapes in Keene.

Major E. M. Keyes and Dr. J. B. Duffy of the Keene baseball association, went to Bellows Falls Sunday to attend a meeting of the Twin-State league. Brattleboro and Springfield failed to show up, however, and no meeting was held. It is stated that there is a movement on foot to get Claremont into the league and leave Brattleboro out. If the champions do not get into line very shortly and allow the league to do business, Brattleboro has money to run a team and officers elected and grounds ready, but is unwilling that other teams should have a chance to do anything unless it is done before the league meets, which in the case of Keene, would be practically impossible and without sense.—[Keene Sentinel.]

Sour grapes. Brattleboro is ready to arrange for the Twin State league season at any time, and was not represented in the meeting at Bellows Falls for the very good reason that no notice was sent to the officers of the local association that a meeting was to be held.

Mid-Winter Carnival at Vt. Academy.

Conditions were perfect for the mid-winter carnival at the Vermont academy in Saxtons River Feb. 28. There were eight races on skis and snowshoes and a ski-jumping contest. The meet was won by the juniors with 29 points, sophomores second with 30 and the freshmen third with 23. The highest individual score was made by Richard Parker, '13, of Montpelier, who had 13 points to his credit. He was first in each of the dash and obstacle race on snowshoes and second in the coast and climb on snowshoes. Pratt, '14, of Cuttingsville, and Martin Gleason, '14, of Wardsboro, each scored 10 points. Gleason won the obstacle race on skis, was second in the coast and climb on skis and third in ski jumping. Albert Dillingham, '14, of Saxtons River, was fourth each in the 100 yard dash on snowshoes and the coast and climb on snowshoes. Dean Lake, '13, of Saxtons River, was first in ski jumping and Arthur H. Thompson, '14, of Saxtons River was second in this event.

Gained 12 Pounds in 22 Hours.

Fritz Hanson had to make 150 pounds, ringside, or forfeit $100 when he wrestled Bingham in Hartford Feb. 27. Fritz trained hard for the match and tipped the scales at 150 pounds and saved his $100. During the match, which was one of the hardest he ever was in, he lost enough flesh to bring him down to 147½ pounds at 12 o'clock, when the match was over, losing two and one-half pounds in 90 minutes. In the next 22 hours, up to 10 o'clock Wednesday night, he gained 12 pounds. This is a peculiar characteristic of athletes in training. They find it a difficult matter to get down to a specified weight and a rest of half a day before a match will gain more than they have taken off in weeks of work. The story is told of George Dixon, the little fighter, that he worked for weeks trying to make 250 pounds, ringside, but on the day of his battle found that he weighed 133 pounds. He forfeited $500 for being overweight. After the fight he stopped on the scales and found that he weighed exactly 130 pounds.

Stark Working for an Athletic Club.

"Kid" Stark, the local boy who has won a reputation in Baltimore and Philadelphia as one of the cleverest light-weight boxers in the East, left town Sunday on a little aunt affair, and at night was in Wardsboro 30 miles from home. Stark expects to arrange some wrestling matches in Newfane and Wardsboro on early dates and J. E. Stanley of Newfane Inn, who was a crack carman in races some years ago, will probably be secured as referee. Stark will also try to arrange wrestling matches between Townsend, Jamaica and Wilmington. Stark has met over 100 young men in Brattleboro and other Windham county towns who have expressed a wish to join the athletic club which he expects to establish here. Stark plans to promote a great variety of sporting events in town the coming summer and in the club of arousing enough interest so that a clubhouse with gymnasium may be established.

Book Will Be Back in the Game.

Johnny Bosk, who clinched the championship of the Twin State league in Brattleboro by winning the last two games in which he pitched, has decided to go back to the game this season, and has forwarded the contract to the local club of the New York state league, which he joined immediately after leaving this town. Bosk's skull was fractured by a pitched ball late in the season while he was playing in Fitchburg, and he was in the hospital in a critical condition several weeks. Since then he has been troubled by poor circulation, and when he has had occasion to stoop over a rush of blood to the head has caused dizziness. He believes the warm weather will relieve him and that it will be possible for him to get back into the game in his old-time form.

Breckenridge Not Engaged.

The statement that E. L. Breckenridge, manager of the Brattleboro team which won the championship of the Twin State league last season and who is now coaching the national naval academy team at Annapolis, has been engaged to return here for another season as player-manager, is wholly without foundation. The directors of the Brattleboro baseball association have moved into no arrangements with Breckenridge and have made no contract with him or with any other person. Some of the directors are in favor of having a player-manager and they have several good men who might be considered for the position, but no definite negotiations have been made.

"Billy" Fitzmaurice of Marlboro, Mass., a former Brattleboro player who was in the New England and Connecticut leagues many seasons, will coach the Amherst Aggies this season.

Dr. Roller will wrestle Fritz Hanson in the Auditorium next Thursday evening. Roller is one of the best known wrestlers in the game and will try to throw Hanson three times within an hour. Fritz has been training faithfully for the match, although the big man weighs 205 pounds Hanson hopes to withstand his attacks for the specified time.

Martin Ludecke writes from New York City to the Phoenix expressing a wish to meet Fritz Hanson in a finish bout. He says nothing about the division of the gate receipts but expresses a willingness to put up a side bet of $100. Ludecke signs himself Eastern middleweight champion. He states that he won the amateur middleweight championship of the world in London in 1908, and that he has held the championship of the United States ever since. He adds that he turned professional a year ago and since then has done most of his wrestling through the east and middle west and that he has never been defeated. He gives his weight at not over 157 pounds, and will agree to meet Hanson if the latter does not weigh over 160. Hanson can train down to 148 pounds.

Frozen face downward in the ice a few feet from the rear door of her home, a mile and a half from Dorset village, the body of Mrs. Hannah C. Mulligan, 60, widow, was found on Sunday by a neighbor who had gone to tell her that her daughter, Miss Max Mulligan, an actress in New York, would come home for a visit Tuesday. It is thought that Mrs. Mulligan died from heart failure Saturday afternoon or night when she stepped out of the house to go to the henhouse a short distance away.

DR. C. H. SHOLES DEAD.

Formerly Owned the Oak Ridge Farm in Dummerston, One of the Largest Estates in Windham County.

Dr. Charles H. Sholes, 55, died in Boston Sunday, Feb. 25. The funeral services were held in the Massachusetts crematory at Forest Hills the following Tuesday. Dr. Sholes's will provided that his body should be cremated and the ashes strewn over the graves of his parents in the cemetery in Goshen, N. H. The will named Charles R. Batt of Newton, Mass., as executor and provided for bequests to charitable organizations amounting to $14,000, as follows: Home for Aged Men, 125 West Springfield street, $4000; Home for Aged Women, 108 Revere street, $4000; Massachusetts Home for the Blind, 1500; Society for Helping Destitute Mothers and Infants, $1500; Boston Society for the Care of Girls, $1500; and the Boston Floating hospital, $1500. The will was executed Nov. 3, 1911.

Dr. Sholes was a large owner of real estate in Boston, paying taxes on property of this class to the value of between $100,000 and $200,000 and it is understood that he had other valuable holdings to a large amount.

Dr. Sholes was the owner of the Oak Ridge farm in Dummerston 10 years or more. He sold this estate in May, 1892, to Charles Miner of Brattleboro, taking the Weston building in this village, near the Main street bridge, in exchange. This farm, one of the finest in Windham county, containing upwards of 35 acres in one parcel, was brought to a high state of cultivation by Dr. Sholes's ownership. It was stocked with 110 head of fine cattle, mostly registered Jerseys, and its corn crops were among the largest raised in New England. It was customary to grow 25 acres of corn in a single field, and the raising was conducted at times as an experiment under the direction of the known fertilizer concerns. Special reports on the Sholes system of corn cultivation and harvesting were used by the agricultural department in Washington. For some years after the farm in Dummerston was sold Dr. and Mrs. Sholes spent a large part of each year at the Brooks House, and Dr. Sholes continued to be a frequent visitor to this town up to five years ago.

Dr. Sholes made his will at one time and that a large part of his fortune was left after his death for the establishment of a hospital in Brattleboro. After the money from the Thompson fund became available for the establishment of a hospital here he changed his will. A little over a year ago Mrs. Sholes died and the doctor wrote to friends here at the time that he believed his own health was failing and he did not believe he had long to live.

Dr. Sholes was a man of striking individuality, of wide experience, of keen intellect and ready wit. He was always an interesting, entertaining and instructive conversationalist. He wielded a facile pen and he sent to his high schools through the Southern and Western states were interesting features in The Phoenix 12 to 15 years ago.

Many of the best people of Brattleboro and Dummerston will remember the excitement created by a highwayman's attack on Dr. Sholes in August, 1884. The doctor was on his way from Dummerston Station to his farm accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. George Cook, employees at the farm, when they were accosted near the Salmon brook bridge by a masked man who ordered them to halt. Cook, who was driving, whipped up the horse. The highwayman fired four shots. The occupants of the carriage escaped uninjured, but two of the bullets struck the horse and the valuable animal died after the farm was reached.

MAY JOIN ANOTHER CIRCUIT.

Valley Fair Would Get More Horses for Races—Meeting of Secretaries in White River Junction.

In the annual meeting of the International racing circuit of Vermont and eastern Canada, held in White River Junction Friday, Oscar F. Benson, secretary of the Valley fair of Brattleboro, was appointed to confer with the Green Mountain circuit, represented by W. K. Farnsworth of Rutland, relative to admitting the state fair and Valley fair to membership in the Green Mountain circuit. These two fairs are the last in the international circuit, and it is believed that by having membership in both circuits they will be in a better position with respect to securing horses for the races. The rules of the two circuits differ somewhat, but there is a prospect that they will be made to agree and that the two fairs mentioned will join the other circuit. It was voted to have five stake races this year, 2.30 trot, 2.30 pace, 2.22 trot, 2.17 pace and 2.12 pace.

The Valley fair was represented by President F. H. O'Connor, Secretary Benson, Supt. W. A. Shumway, W. L. Walker and E. M. Miller. Secretary F. L. Davis of the state fair gave a banquet to about 40 at the Junction House in appreciation of the annual meeting being held there. The secretaries present were O. M. Waterman of the Morrisville fair; H. E. Channell of the Sherbrooke fair; Mr. Barton of the White River fair; Mr. Cady of the St. Johnsbury fair; O. F. Benson of the Valley fair; F. L. Davis of the Vermont state fair. The secretaries were accompanied by several of the owners of each association. Dr. J. L. Gaines of the Newport stock farm also was present. President Channell presided over the meeting, and he was re-elected president and secretary.

"YE MUST BE BORN AGAIN."

Sermon by Rev. R. M. Houghton in Evangelistic Service Listened to by 322—Chorus Largest in the Series.

Although held at a different hour than usual the attendance at the evangelistic service in the Congregational church Sunday evening was larger than at the service the previous Sunday evening, notwithstanding the fact that a public union no-license rally was scheduled to begin immediately at the close of the church service. The attendance was 322, and the chorus was the largest thus far in the series of meetings, the singers and players of instruments numbering 45. On account of the union meeting the service was shortened somewhat by cutting out some of the usual singing of hymns. For an offering a male quartet consisting of W. A. Gilbert, W. S. Stearns, F. C. Adams and A. L. Clapp sang "Remember now thy Creator, by Rhoades, and a violin solo, "Berceuse," by Renard, was rendered with pleasing effect by C. M. Dugan. At the close of the sermon the quartet sang "Ye must be born again," arranged for male voices for this occasion.

For a scripture lesson Rev. R. M. Houghton read the story of Christ's discourse with Nicodemus, as contained in the third chapter of John, and his text was John 3, 7: "Marvel not that I say unto thee, that thou must be born again." The subject of the sermon was "The new birth." Every great evangelist, Mr. Houghton said, has preached from that text many times. It is one of the eternal truths of God. The words are Jesus's words, and the reason why they seem so mysterious is because they are so divine. The new birth is a thing of every day occurrence, illustrated every day of our lives. Those who are uncertain as to whether there is a God have not experienced the new birth. The soul has to go through a certain experience; it has to receive the sunshine of Christ's truth, as in the cases of St. Paul and Luther, and enable it to enter the kingdom of heaven. There is nothing surer than this, that every life has pent up within itself the possibilities of a new birth which need only to have certain conditions brought to bear to enable them to triumph over the flesh. Mr. Houghton said he considered the privilege of being born again a blessed one and that he wished the text read, "Ye must be born again."

The quartet changed the wording of the chorus of the last verse of the hymn to correspond with that suggestion, with pleasing effect.

IMPRESSIONS OF ATLANTA.

S. B. Emerson Writes Interestingly About the Growing Southern City.

Mr. and Mrs. S. B. Emerson are now traveling through the South. Many of Mr. Emerson's friends will be interested in reading part of a letter which he sent to E. C. Crosby, addressed at Atlanta, Ga., Feb. 20.

I have now been in this city nearly a week and have seen something of the place. At first, I was puzzled to understand how such a city of 16,000 people could have grown up in the middle of Georgia, without any water communication, but as I explore the various industries and study the conditions here it is dawning upon me, that there must be some good reason for this growth. I find that there are more than a dozen large manufacturing concerns, and that a marked number of the railroad repair shops and some cars are built here. I have not explored the factories as yet. Today I passed through a foundry where they were pouring iron into a wheeling red hot car wheels into the annealing pits. They had a good layout for such work. This concern make a specialty of having old engines and cars repaired and run. There are a whole lot of short lines of road that are run independently and such running stock is in demand. Coal and iron are available at low cost and labor is cheap compared with some sections of the country.

I don't think I would care to exchange Brattleboro as a place to live, for Atlanta, but anybody in charge here to meet the demand for skilled mechanics. I think repair work calls for fully as skillful mechanics as does new work. The climate here is mild, neither too cold nor too hot. There are about 40,000 or more people of the black race. I am staying at Spelman seminary with my daughter, Grace. Atlanta university, where your sister, Mrs. Rice, used to be, is a little northeast of this place and in full view, and a Baptist college for colored men nearby, and the whole hill is covered with houses filled with blacks, and they seem to be pretty well to do, as a rule, much more so than in Savannah, I should judge.

This city is well equipped with trolley cars, more so than any place I have seen. I wish you could have been with me today at the exposition. This is a fine layout. The water in the upper basin is about the consistency of pea soup. It goes through large settling basins into huge vats in a large building. The water passes through sand, part of the vats being used at a time, while others are being "washed out" by turning the water the opposite way, which washes the sand and cleanses it. This is done by a series of levers and gates, and the water enters the pumps as clear as spring water. There are four pumps in all, the largest going to throw 10,000,000 gallons a day. They are using now 14,000,000 to 17,000,000 gallons of water a day. I think it the best water I ever saw, and as coal and oil are delivered at less than $3 a ton, pumping water is not so bad a proposition as it is in Northern cities. The water rate for families in charge here, as I was informed me, was 50 cents a month, at least, the water being metered.

The city is scattered over a wide territory with centres of trade in many sections. There is no central market and prices seem to be about the same as at home for first-class goods. The city, like all agricultural western towns, is raw and ragged. When you get off the pavements the roads are abominable and crossing the streets between crossings is out of the question, but people get used to such conditions, but I would not like it. I came from Boston to Savannah by boat and had fine weather all the way, which was my good luck.

State Advertising Pays.

Acting under the authority conferred by the last legislature in establishing a public bureau, Secretary of State Guy W. Bailey several months ago issued a book setting forth the agricultural opportunities of Vermont and containing notices of many farms offered for sale. Classified advertisements describing this book were published in the 16 states of Massachusetts, Vermont, New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Michigan, Illinois, Wisconsin, Kansas and Indiana, also the province of Quebec.

As a result of this advertising which cost a little less than $300, replies have been received from every state in the union, from British Columbia, Mexico, the Panama canal zone and France. Up to last week 201 replies had been received from Vermont and 1314 from outside the state. A large mailing list has been secured and in addition to the sending out of the farm book, the book on apple culture issued by the state department of agriculture has been followed by letters to those receiving them and also to persons advertising in the farm book, in order to "keep the good word" of results.

The replies indicate successful results far beyond all expectations.
